

The Boston Globe

MEDIA ALERT

Interview Opportunity

The Boston Globe: “The Curse Breakers” Celebrating 20 years since the Red Sox ended their 86-year World Series drought

WHAT: Twenty years ago, The Red Sox did something no baseball team had ever done — or has since — when they rallied down 3-0 to beat the hated Yankees in the ALCS. Then, it was onto a four-game sweep of the Cardinals to hoist the World Series trophy. Prior to 2004, it had been 86 long years since the Red Sox won the World Series. Many were starting to believe they’d never see it happen again.

To celebrate, the Globe is spending October looking back on one of the most triumphant moments in Boston sports history through a three-part podcast series featuring Terry Francona and Globe columnist Dan Shaughnessy, a mini-documentary featuring Sox ace Pedro Martinez telling the story of the 2004 team’s impact on the Boston Dominican community, and content specials highlighting the lesser-known figures of the 2004 team, the Globe staff’s poignant recollections of that World Series and other yet-to-be-told stories.

WHO: The Boston Globe Sports Columnist and Associate Editor Dan Shaughnessy
The Boston Globe Sports Media Columnist Chad Finn
The Boston Globe MLB Columnist Peter Abraham

WHEN: Sunday, October 20 and Sunday, October 27:
Special print series available to read in Sunday Globe editions and online at globe.com/sox2004
Final episode of “The Curse Breakers” podcast available to hear at globe.com/sports
“Three Kings” mini-documentary available to watch at globe.com/sox2004

CONTACT: Please email requests to Elevate Communications at Globe@elevatecom.com

###